Breeze 徜徉

Winter Issue 2017/18

A breeze can occur while you are taking a relaxing stroll, a romantic walk by the sea or stopping to smell the flowers. With this feeling in mind, our publication aims to soothe the souls of our readers.

The New Year holiday is often the busiest time for travel lovers, who waste no time in slipping off somewhere to relax and recharge with loved ones. Yet dashing off to an exotic location is not the only way to recharge our lives as there is an end to every trip. In fact, taking baby steps: such as getting up earlier to go on a jog every morning, choosing a vegetarian diet once a week, or catching up with friends every once in a while can be equally energising. With each little step in adjusting our pace of life, it can help shedding the burden on our shoulders, infusing us with positive energy at all times.

With hopes to motivate and encourage everyone to stay healthy by starting with the small things in life, we have launched AIA Vitality and remained a close and reliable companion in your health journey. In the past year, we have been devoted to caring for each and every customer; from prevention, protection to rehabilitation, we have stood by your side in overcoming every obstacle in life.

However, our work does not stop there. To fully integrate social responsibility into our core business, we strive to expand our cover and have introduced various market-first protection plans in Hong Kong. By helping more people gain access to protection, we are “creating shared values” for both our society and economy.

Through a selection of specially arranged sponsorships, including The AIA Great European Carnival, the corporate alliance with Hong Kong Disneyland Resort as well as concert sponsorships, we hope to bring you more happy and memorable occasions. This is also testimony to our various efforts in helping people live longer, healthier and better lives.

Wishing you good health and happiness in the year ahead.

David Beckham: What's Your Why?

Health is about motivation as much as diet and exercise. Have you ever thought about the reasons that keep you going? David Beckham, international sporting icon and active promoter of healthy living, has been appointed as AIA's Global Ambassador to inspire people everywhere to live longer, healthier and better lives. The newly launched "What's Your Why?" campaign featuring Beckham highlights the many reasons why people want to live a healthy life. Let's hear about Beckham's why now!

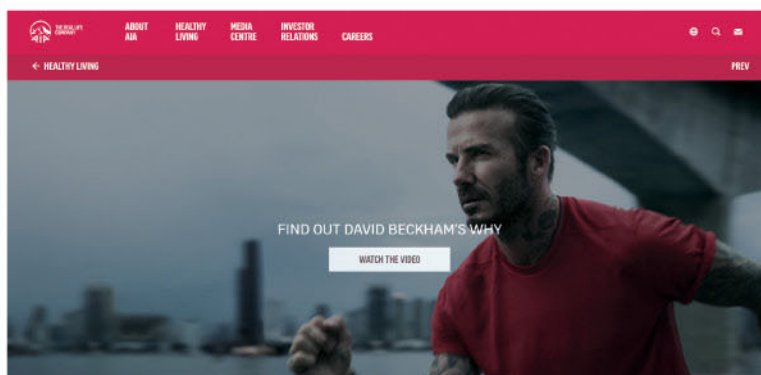

A man with dark hair and a beard, wearing a blue button-down shirt, is holding a brown bowl of salad with his left hand and a fork with his right hand. He is looking directly at the camera with a slight smile. The background is a dark wooden wall. The text "What motivates me is to be a fit dad." is written in a cursive font on the right side of the image.

“What motivates me is to be a fit dad.”

Reasons to keep going

Throughout his career in elite sport, David Beckham has always been devoted to being the best he can be and setting a positive example for those around him. Although no longer a full-time professional football player, Beckham is still persistent in his pursuit of a healthy lifestyle. What is it that motivates him? “Getting up early, hitting the road, sweating it out... I asked myself why would I do that? I think what motivates me is to be a fit dad. That has always motivated me, but now I’ve finished playing and have four children that I hope they will think they have a healthy dad. So that’s what I want to continue to have. I want to continue to live a healthy fit life and live longer,” said Beckham.

The updates for the “What’s Your Why?” campaign are posted to AIA’s official website, whatsyourwhy.aia.com.

Besides motivation, action is what matters. What are Beckham’s tips for staying active? “Obviously, it’s down to personal investment. What you want to actually put into your workout; what you want to put into your life. It doesn’t have to be joining a gym or doing a marathon. It could mean literally just being outdoors with the family. One of my favourite things is to spend time with the kids, walking through the park, walking outdoors, and it doesn’t have to be anything that is expensive. That’s the kind of thing that I really love doing.”

AIA x David Beckham #WhatsYourWhy Online Video

Beckham worked with Wally Pfister, Academy Award winner for Best Cinematography, on shooting a video in Bangkok for the “What’s Your Why?” campaign. The still photos of the video are shot by New York-based photographer, Joey Lawrence. Beckham shared his filming experience on the set: “I think it’s been great work in Bangkok in general. I’ve been here a few times, but being here with AIA and working with a great team has been a pleasure. It’s been long hard days but days that I think we’ve all enjoyed just being able to actually be here. I am excited to see the end product because I think I’ve worked with two great guys and their team.”

Beckham made healthy mooncakes with 40 children and inspired them to stay fit and eat healthy.

AIA Healthy Living Tour: Hong Kong

As part of the launch of the "What's Your Why?" campaign, Beckham undertook the AIA Healthy Living Tour during the week of 18 September 2017, visiting Hong Kong, Korea, Singapore and Malaysia to share his personal motivations for staying healthy.

In his first stop in Hong Kong, Beckham was invited to join 40 children aged eight to nine from Fresh Fish Traders' School in a cooking class as a celebration for the upcoming Mid-Autumn Festival. He said, "It's great to be back in Hong Kong to celebrate Mid-Autumn traditions by preparing healthy mooncakes. We want to help people take charge of their health in a fun and achievable way. I love cooking for my family and making delicious and healthy food is something I try to do on a regular basis." For more highlights of the event, please Click here to view the video.

Beckham then had an exclusive meeting with the winners of the AIA Vitality Healthy Living Photo Contest. The 20 winners previously submitted a healthy living photo with an explanation as to why they were motivated to join AIA Vitality to pursue a healthy lifestyle. They were all thrilled to enjoy the opportunity of a lifetime to meet with the star footballer and take individual photos with him. Beckham also took the chance to advocate the benefits and importance of a healthy lifestyle. The marvellous event marked the end of Beckham's trip in Hong Kong, but he went on the AIA Healthy Living Tour to inspire more people in other Asian countries. As the Company's Global Ambassador, Beckham will continue to support AIA's efforts in improving the quality of people's lives across the world. Please stay tuned for updates.

During the event, Beckham encouraged everyone to start with the little choices in life to achieve good health.

AIA's Newly-released "Love is in Every Moment" Mini-film Anita Yuen: To Stand by Your Family; To Love in Time

Familial love is a timeless theme prominently featured in countless classics. To spread the moving message of "Live in the moment, love without regret", AIA has launched the third "Love is in Every Moment" mini-film. Inspired by a true story, this new episode tells of a loving family of three who were struck by one devastating event after the other – the husband was diagnosed with cancer and it was later discovered the daughter has a brain tumour. But by the power of love and support for one another, the father and daughter eventually overcame the critical illnesses. Within 18 hours upon social media roll-out, the mini-film has received more than 1 million views and has broken the records of the previous two mini-films of the same series. No wonder it's now the talk of the town.

The third AIA's "Love is in Every Moment" mini-film stars two-time Hong Kong Film Awards' Best Actress winner Anita Yuen, who played a resilient wife and mother who supports the family through difficult times. In addition to her sincere and touching acting, Anita's role of a good mother and wife in real life also makes her the perfect fit for the female protagonist. Anita and Mia, who played the role of the daughter, not only show touching love between a mother and a daughter inside the mini-film, but the pair also remains close in real life. On the day of the premiere, Anita shared her memorable moments while shooting on set. Breeze is pleased to offer a glimpse of Anita's thoughts on the message of "Love is in Every Moment".

Q: Anita, as a seasoned actress, can you tell us your reasons for taking part in this mini-film?

A: I was attracted by the script and story. I always like stories based on real-life events. The theme of this mini-film is familial love and the plot is inspired by a true story. As a wife and mother myself, I can easily relate to the events in the story. One of the most touching parts for me was how the family offered support to lessen each other's burdens during difficult times. The story is really thought-provoking.

Q: What is the difference between filming a mini-film and a movie?

A: This is my first time taking part in a mini-film. Compared to movies, a mini-film has to tell a story in seven or eight minutes; the plot is therefore more condensed and tight-knit. As an actress who likes improvisational acting, the experience was also challenging for me as I had to understand and get into character in a short time span. However, thanks to the professional filming crew, especially the director who gave me lots of references, such as the background music used for each scene, I was able to get into my role in just half a day.

Q: Does being a mother help you get into character?

A: Being a mother myself enabled me to understand what kind of results the director was aiming for. I could also use my own experience to empathise with the character and project real feelings during the shooting. As a mother, I would try to think from a child's perspective, not only in the film but also in real life; this allows me to establish rapport and meaningful exchanges with Mia.

Q: How do you feel working with a child actress?

A: I have worked with quite a number of children before so I know it is not easy. But Mia is a wonderfully talented little actress: shooting went incredibly smooth. I was able to bond with her quickly on set and the shooting was a pleasant experience for me.

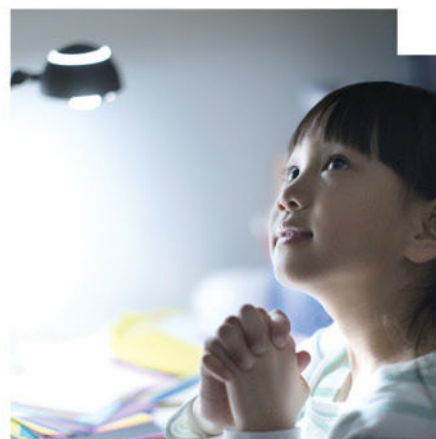

Q: What were some memorable moments while shooting?

A: Many of the scenes with Mia were memorable for me. There is one scene in particular that showed my exhaustion on screen given that my husband was diagnosed with cancer. Meanwhile, I discovered my daughter's lies and had to scold her. As I was really close with Mia, she did not want to be scolded by me and was thus unwilling to begin shooting. I had to patiently counsel her and I knew that we only had one chance for the shot. Eventually, we succeeded in getting the scene in one take, but Mia refused to talk to me for the rest of the day. Luckily, she resumed her cheerfulness the next day. Such authenticity and forthrightness are unique to children. I hope Mia will never lose that innocence.

Q: The theme of the mini-film is "Love is in Every Moment". What is your reaction to these words?

A: I have very deep feelings for this theme. I think that family is irreplaceable, and that is why we should all treasure every moment with our family and express our love in time. No matter how challenging life may be, hurdles can be overcome as long as the whole family can stand by and love each other. I also feel that in our society, a lot of selfish behaviour stems from the lack of affection and love. Therefore, I hope that we can all be a little more generous when it comes to expressing our love. At the same time, we should not forget to offer long-term care and protection for our loved ones.

AIA Hong Kong Launches AIA “Protect Elite Ultra” Critical Illness Protection Market-first Family Protection Feature Safeguards Your Loved Ones

On the first day of its release, the third “Love is in Every Moment” mini-film has taken the online community by storm and has touched the hearts of many. Inspired by a true story, the mini-film encourages many to review their own protection plans: what kind of plan can offer real support for themselves and their loved ones?

On the day of the mini-film’s premiere, AIA announced the launch of AIA “Protect Elite Ultra” critical illness protection. This brand new plan’s first-in-market family protection feature, which extends premium waiver cover to a parent or spouse, is the first of its kind in Hong Kong. Critical illness protection products in the market typically offer premium waiver only to the payor (policy owner), i.e. one of the parents; while premium waiver is unavailable for adult policies. Breaking from this norm, AIA “Protect Elite Ultra” critical illness protection offers the family protection feature with no additional purchase¹ or health information required: both parents of the insured child are covered, and adult policies are provided with the Waiver of Premium on Death (Spouse). The pioneering solution helps Hong Kong people bridge their protection gap, supporting customers and their families in their fight against critical illnesses together.

- Ms Bonnie Tse, General Manager, Business Strategy & Marketing, AIA Hong Kong & Macau (middle); Ms Edith Yiu, Chief Brand and Communications Officer, AIA Hong Kong & Macau (left); and Mr Felix Fung, Head of Product Strategy & Management, AIA Hong Kong & Macau (right) hope the launch of AIA “Protect Elite Ultra” critical illness protection would support customers and their families in fighting critical illnesses together.
- On behalf of AIA, Ms Bonnie Tse (left), makes a donation of HK$600,000 to The Hong Kong Society for Rehabilitation to support the Easy-Access Transport Services of the Society to provide barrier-free transport services for people who have mobility difficulties. This donation further reinforces AIA Hong Kong’s belief in accompanying patients through their rehabilitation journey and providing support to those in need. The donation cheque was received by Dr Kar-Wai Tong, Deputy Chief Executive Officer, The Hong Kong Society for Rehabilitation (right).

The AIA Great European Carnival

Laughter is in the Air

The much-anticipated AIA Great European Carnival has returned! Like previous years, the carnival accompanies everyone through Christmas, New Year's Eve and the New Year. It features a multitude of new elements that turn the Central Harbourfront into a fun-filled zone for the whole family, hoping to offer you an experience more exciting and amazing than ever and to fill your new year with happy and positive energy!

Authentic AR experience

The sought-after AIA Real Life Zone has made its return to the carnival with a brand new AR (Augmented Reality) experience. The merge of real and virtual worlds takes players young and old through the African Savanna and Polar Regions. While you are "interacting" with all kinds of exotic animals, the camera will record your adventure in the two worlds; the video will then be sent to you via email.

AIA Real Life Zone presents visitors with a new AR (Augmented Reality) experience; their adventures will be captured by the camera on the screen.

Thrilling rides

It wouldn't be a carnival without amusement rides. This year's highlight is undoubtedly the "Remix Orbitor", a washing machine-like ride that rotates 360° with seats that turn upside down. The centrifugal force escalates with the speed – how thrilling! True daredevils can try the "Capriolo" which rotates at a speed of up to 90km/h, or the "KMG Booster" that spins 360° at high altitudes. These awesome rides will surely leave you an impression!

Appreciate an upside-down Victoria Harbour with the brand-new "Remix Orbitor"!

Recommendations for families

Besides the thrilling rides, this year's carnival also brought in a number of child-friendly attractions to promise everyone a great time! They include "Driving School" and "Canoes". The latter offers an exciting experience by letting children become little captains and steer a boat along the winding "channel". Besides that, many classic rides have also made a comeback this year: such as "Wave Swinger" and "London Bus". Both adults and children can enjoy the unique experience of "flying" amidst the bustling city.

Numerous game booths

Game booths are also must-have items in carnivals. Both adults and children can showcase their skills in more than 20 game booths including ball tossing, darts, basketball, table shuffleboard and more. Over a million cuddly toys are waiting for a new home; but if you want to leave with your hands full, you will need good eyesight, some luck and a bit of skill!

World-class circus performance

Another new attraction of the carnival is "The Great Circus of Europe". 25 experienced performers from around the world showcase challenging stunts such as riding motorcycles at speeds of over 100km/h inside a steel-mesh sphere, and acrobats performing a 7-person pyramid on a high wire suspended 8 metres away from the ground. The awe-inspiring performance is truly a feast to the eyes.

Are Those Suffering from the “Three Highs” Eligible for Medical and Critical Illness Protection?

Michael

Age 42, non-smoker
Occupation: accountant
Family status: married with a son and daughter

Diabetes, hypertension and hyperlipidaemia – known as the “three-highs” – are common among Hong Kongers. Besides having to pay attention to their daily habits and diet, patients are often restricted in their choice of medical or critical illness protection plans. AIA’s newly launched Metro-Trio Medical and Critical Illness Protection Plan is the first in the market to offer individuals suffering from “three-highs” an all-round solution encompassing medical, critical illness and life protection. Even those with HbA1c of as high as 10%, the highest eligible level in Hong Kong*, can enjoy the best coverage as well as a guaranteed renewal: what great news!

* Data collected in January 2018.

All-round solution encompassing medical, critical illness and life protection

The 42-year-old Stable Mature Michael is at the height of his career. He had devoted his life to his work and was unable to maintain a healthy diet and lifestyle. A few years ago, his health issue started surfacing and he was diagnosed with “three-highs” – diabetes, hypertension and hyperlipidaemia.

Michael said, “I did not think I was prone to the ‘three-highs’ until my body showed telling signs. Only then did I realise the importance of safeguarding my health. As a chronic patient, it is hard for me to purchase medical and critical illness protection plans. Not only does this leave a glaring gap in my cover, but the increasing medical expenses give me enormous pressure.” Michael recently purchased AIA Metro-Trio Medical and Critical Illness Protection Plan, which offers innovative, all-round cover for his medical, critical illness and life protection needs and gives him a sense of security.

A new and healthy lifestyle

Besides purchasing AIA Metro-Trio Medical and Critical Illness Protection Plan, Michael has also joined AIA Vitality, meaning he enjoys an instant 10% premium discount and an additional Super Medical Reward¹ with the opportunity to reimburse up to 70% of his surgical expenses and some of the confinement benefits if his health condition improves, as well as a lump-sum payment to support his family's finances if he is diagnosed with a critical illness or passes away.

“‘Three-highs’ are closely related to one's diet and lifestyle, which is why I have decided to abandon my unhealthy ways. AIA Vitality also motivates me to be more proactive in managing my health and be more persistent in following a healthy lifestyle,” said Michael.

Scenario:

Michael is diagnosed with stroke and colorectal cancer. He makes claims for the medical expenses and critical illness benefit.

Health is your biggest asset, and it may take a bad turn without any signs; one cannot help but feel lost as if the world has turned upside down. We believe getting the best medical care means much more than just having your medical expenses covered. From diagnosis to treatment and to rehabilitation, we are always by your side.

AIA brings you Personal Medical Case Management, a service that helps you select appropriate medical options by offering comprehensive information and professional advice.

What is your biggest worry during sickness?

Modern medicine allows patients the freedom to choose from an array of specialties, treatments and technologies. Multiple options may offer reassurance and a sense of hope, but at the same time they also give rise to confusion, anxiety and a sense of helplessness as a result of decision fatigue: What does my diagnosis really mean? Is the diagnosis correct? Have all the necessary tests been carried out? What is the right treatment for me and where can I receive it? Are there any new treatments available? Am I making an informed decision?

It is natural for one to raise these questions in times of illness, yet you may not always be able to find all the answers. As such, it is nearly impossible for a patient to decide whom to rely on amid a sea of advice, recommendations and diverse opinions. The battle against a serious illness is the greatest and most important fight you will ever wage. Personal Medical Case Management* is here to ease your burden.

What is Personal Medical Case Management?

James (Alias), age 23

A diagnosis of cancer was overturned by the Medix team saving James from surgery and chemotherapy.

- 1 James suffered from viral hepatitis and was treated with interferon. Despite treatment, he suffered a high fever for no apparent reason over a period of several months.
- 2 James underwent an operation for a suspected abdominal tumour. The pathological examination showed a rare myofibroblastic tumour, which has a bleak prognosis. Further surgery was planned to fully remove the tumour, followed by a course of chemotherapy.
- 3 James's family asked the team of Personal Medical Case Management for advice regarding further treatment. Medix studied every detail of the patient's medical history and medical data, and sent the medical imaging files to be re-examined. Finally, a lengthy multidisciplinary consultation was held.
- 4 Because this diagnosis was so rare, to ensure it was accurate, Medix re-evaluated the pathology results at a leading international medical centre experienced in treating related cases.
- 5 A renowned expert pathologist from a top US cancer research centre re-examined the samples and discovered that it was not a myofibroblastic tumour at all, but rather an inflammatory process caused by an infection. This process was not cancerous and did not require surgery or chemotherapy.
- 6 James received daily treatment with an anti-inflammatory drug. He has regained health and returned to work. He is now under long-term monitoring.

Illness is less worrisome as long as the appropriate treatment is applied. Personal Medical Case Management helps you select the optimal medical option by offering comprehensive information and professional advice after looking from around the world! Raising Children as Vegetarians

With more and more people being more mindful about their health and diet, vegetarianism is undeniably becoming a trend. As a number of parents are choosing to raise their children as vegetarians, some fear that a meatless diet might cause malnourishment and adverse effects on their children's growth. So how should vegetarian children stay healthy?

Can children go vegetarian?

Everyone knows that a balanced diet is the golden rule to good health. So how exactly are vegetarians different from picky eaters? In fact, the principle of following a balanced diet is to obtain the necessary nutrients through a range of foods.

Even after eliminating meat, a wide variety still remain, including vegetables, fruits, grains, legumes and algae. By carefully selecting a balanced intake of important nutrients like protein, iron, calcium and zinc, everyone can go meatless and stay healthy, regardless of his/her age. As such, parents need not worry about their children's growth because of a vegetarian diet. In addition, going vegetarian is a good way to help children stay away from excessive intake of saturated fat and meat-based hormones.

Weaning on to a vegetarian diet?

If it is fine for children to go meatless, the next question is when is the best time to start. Vegetarian therapist Ms Arlene-Frances Wu suggests parents to start introducing a vegetarian diet when weaning their babies. In addition to the staple of breast or formula milk, parents can slowly incorporate various types of food to their infant's diet by mixing mineral-rich leafy vegetables to baby porridge, followed by carrots that are packed with vitamin A, pumpkins, as well as other types of gourds and easy-to-digest grains.

Five healthy vegetarian ingredients

Parents may still be confused about vegetarian food choices. Vegetarian therapist recommends five healthy foods that are especially great for babies and young children.

Millet

Millet is highly nutritious and easily digestible. It helps prevent anaemia and is great for the bone development of babies and young children. Its vitamin B and magnesium can also improve sleep.

Suggested method of cooking: add to porridge, or mix with carrots and corn to make hash browns.

Quinoa

Quinoa is rich in carbohydrates. Its protein content is also four times that of white rice, potatoes, barley and millet, making it a great source of protein for children. Quinoa is gluten-free and safe for consumption even by people with gluten intolerance.

Suggested method of cooking: add to rice balls or sushi to increase fibre intake.

Amaranth

Amaranth has a similar nutritional value as quinoa but contains more iron, which is great for developing children.

Suggested method of cooking: add to rice balls or sushi to increase fibre intake.

Chinese yam

Chinese yam has a natural sweet flavour and has mild medicinal properties. According to Traditional Chinese Medicine, it is great for *qi circulation and has stomach- and spleen-tonifying benefits. It can help children absorb nutrients.

Suggested method of cooking: add to porridge or soup.

* Qi is the vital substance constituting the human body; it supports metabolism, warms the body and defends it against illnesses.

Red lentils

Red lentils are rich in fibre, folate and minerals, among which the content of manganese is as high as 49%. Manganese is indispensable for children's growth, recovery from injury, brain development, as well as maintaining a regular metabolic rate for sugar, insulin and cholesterol. Compared to other types of legumes, red lentils turn soft more easily and are especially suitable for children's consumption.

Suggested method of cooking: add to thick soup.

Eat healthy with the right cooking methods

One of the main reasons to go vegetarian is to stay healthy. Besides paying attention to the selection of foods, one should also mind the cooking methods. Many traditional Chinese vegetarian dishes are prepared by pan-frying or deep-frying and may also contain a large amount of seasoning and colourings, which are detrimental for both adults and children. Children should stick to a light diet, with steaming as the main cooking method. Steaming helps to retain the natural flavours of food and uses much less oil. However, steaming vegetables for a long time can also lead to the loss of nutrients. Hence, careful adjustment of cooking times is key. As long as the balance of nutrients and the cooking methods are handled well, children can develop a meatless lifestyle while staying healthy.

Reversing Diabetes

It is said that Lu You, a poet from Southern Song Dynasty, suffered from excessive thirst and poor eyesight because of diabetes. But with his special attention to his health and wellness, he lived to the ripe age of 86. Although referred to by a different name, diabetes has been chronicled in detail as early as in the ancient book “The Yellow Emperor’s Inner Canon”. With the accumulative experience of all the medical specialists throughout the years, a comprehensive treatment for diabetes has been developed in Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM).

Heat in the three organs causes excessive thirst and hunger

City-goers of our generation are picking up unhealthy habits and as such developing various kinds of diseases, among which diabetes is garnering the most attention for inflicting younger individuals. From the perspective of TCM, the causes of diabetes include weak congenital constitution, an unbalanced diet, fluctuating emotional states and fatigue, all of which lead to a depletion of body fluids as well as dryness and heat in the body. The impact of diabetes is widespread; it may lead to various complications, such as blood circulation problems, foot infections and vision problems.

Diabetes is closely linked to the lungs, stomachs and kidneys, and can be divided into three types depending on its pathology: upper, middle and lower. Lungs are responsible for the distribution of body fluids; when they exhibit excessive dryness and heat, persistent thirst and dry skin are the results, and is referred to as “Upper Diabetes”. “Middle Diabetes”, on the other hand, is stemmed from heightened metabolism as a result of excessive fire in the stomach, the organ responsible for digesting foods. This consequently leads to overeating, constant hunger and a weak and thin physique. Lastly, the kidneys are responsible for regulating body fluids. When they exhibit yin deficiency, frequent urination and cloudy urine – a condition called “Lower Diabetes” – are the aftermath.

Herbal medicine regulates the organs

TCM tries to improve the conditions by regulating the organs' functions. Many herbs have been proven effective in lowering blood sugar. The principle of treatment for Upper Diabetes is to lubricate the lungs and clear heat with the use of Mongolian snakegourd root, dwarf lilyturf tuber, kudzu vine root, and more. For Middle Diabetes, cape jasmine fruit, Chinese goldthread, and poria – to name but a few – are used to replenish qi in the spleen. Lower Diabetes, meanwhile, is treated by nourishing yin in the kidney using Chinese foxglove root, Chinese yam, Siberian Solomon's seal, etc. Patients should seek a doctor's advice before using any of the herbs, and should be mindful of their circulation of blood and qi, which controls blood-related complications.

Achieve good health with the right diet

According to the description in TCM studies, most patients develop diabetes from an over-consumption of fatty food. This shows that a right diet is key to treating the disease. However, many patients have the misconception that they can regulate blood sugar levels by quitting carbohydrates alone. Unfortunately, a diet with high meat content and few carbohydrates can bring adverse effects and lead to high cholesterol and high blood pressure.

Dr Lui Siu Sing advises patients to eat clean and light. They should cut back on processed foods and fatty meat, and eat more whole grains like brown rice, red rice, whole wheat bread and sweet potatoes. These foods can provide energy for the body without raising the blood sugar levels instantly. It is also important for patients to drink plenty of water to minimise the impact of high blood sugar. Regular exercises and muscle training can deplete blood sugar as well. With careful management of one's lifestyle and diet, diabetes can be cured.

TCM terms at a glance

Qi: qi is the vital substance constituting the human body; it supports metabolism, warms the body and defends it against illnesses.

Yin-yang: the concept of yin-yang is used to refer to multiple binary oppositions in the universe, such as interior (yin) and exterior (yang); cold (yin) and heat (yang); and deficiency (yin) and excess (yang). TCM believes that yin-yang harmony is the key to good health.

Trending Sports to Try in 2018

Barre

Popular among celebrities like Madonna and Natalie Portman, Barre has been trending in the US and Europe in recent years. The sport integrates yoga, Pilates and ballet and trains muscles and improves body shape through a range of stretches. Despite its relatively subtle and static movements, it is harder than expected due to its demand for accuracy and high body coordination. Barre is excellent for stretching deeper muscles and bettering conditions like rounded back, poor sitting posture, out-toeing, etc.

Piloxing

Who says that boxing and dance cannot be married into one? Invented by a Swedish dancer, Piloxing combines fast and powerful boxing moves and muscle-building Pilates with high-energy Latin dance workouts. The fusion regime has been trending in the US and Europe in recent years. Its high demand of speed and power prevalent in boxing and dancing paired with the use of specially made weighted gloves ensure quick fat burn and body sculpting results. What's more, it also trains perseverance, flexibility and concentration.

Animal Flow

Imagine a sport that lets you mimic different kinds of animals! Animal Flow, a bodyweight workout, is founded on the movements of apes, beasts, crabs and scorpions and comprises jumping, crawling, etc. A hot trend in the US, the equipment-less workout trains flexibility, agility, endurance and core muscles in a short time span. As the new trend hits Hong Kong, fitness programmes and large-scale events on Animal Flow are also emerging in our city, offering everyone a chance to have real fun when doing sports!

We all know that exercise is good for us, but it is becoming more of a luxury for city dwellers' hectic lifestyle. In this issue, Breeze is pleased to introduce several new and trending sports available in Hong Kong, which will hopefully change your view on working out and hopefully entice you to give them a try!

Spikeball

Have you ever heard of Spikeball? It is a sport similar to volleyball but uses a round trampoline net and a bouncing ball and can be played anywhere. Two teams of two compete for 15 points in each set. The teams take turn to hit the ball using their hands. As there are no boundaries to the game and one has to defend from all angles, the sport demands great resilience and agility, making it more challenging than other ball games. The new trend of Spikeball has just spread to Hong Kong, and sport associations are organising trial days. Invite your friends to have a go at it now!

Standup paddleboarding

As a popular tourist destination, Hawaii is known for not only its sun and beach, but also its distinctive water sports, many of which have spread to other parts of the world: such is the case of standup paddleboarding. It is an easy sport that can be enjoyed regardless of the sea current.

It works out several muscle groups at the same time, including arm, back, thigh and abdominal muscles, thereby achieving weight loss.

Besides standup paddleboarding, standup paddleboard yoga is also taking the world by storm. It not only includes stretching moves found in ordinary yoga, but also demands efforts to keep the board balanced and afloat. It is ideal for training core muscles, including abs, back and pelvis, as well as muscle strength throughout the whole body. Compared with ordinary yoga, standup paddleboard yoga results in better weight loss and body sculpting.

The New Year is the perfect time to build up new exercise habits. How about giving these hip sports a try with your family and friends to work towards a healthy life together?

AIA Accompanies You on the Journey to Health

Marvel 10K Weekend 2017 – Presented by AIA Vitality

Marvel 10K Weekend 2017 – Presented by AIA Vitality, the one and only official running event in the city to be held inside Hong Kong Disneyland Resort, was successfully held on 16 and 17 September 2017. Over 10,000 runners enrolled, setting a new record for the event. Many participants dressed up as their favourite Super Heroes and ran through the park's seven themed lands, during which they posed and took photos with Disney Friends and Marvel Super Heroes and had a great time together.

All participants were excited to enjoy their run in the magical land of Disney.

Peter Crewe, Chief Executive Officer, AIA Hong Kong & Macau, also took part in the race to embark on the health journey with fellow runners.

Little runners spent a special and fun day with Super Heroes.

Oxfam Trailwalker 2017

Meanwhile, Oxfam Trailwalker – for which AIA Vitality has been the Principal Sponsor for the third successive year – was held on 17-19 November 2017. AIA fielded 36 teams comprising 144 people for the charitable event, making it the largest corporate participant for the third year running. AIA has extended its sponsorship of Oxfam Trailwalker in the name of AIA Vitality for another three years (2018-2020), to support all walkers throughout the 100km challenge and Oxfam's poverty alleviation efforts all over the world. AIA also hopes to motivate more people to embark on their health journey, helping people live longer, healthier and better lives!

More than 200 AIA volunteers supported the event and cheered on the walkers along the trail.

On the day of the event, all 5,200 participants were excited to set off!

AIA fielded a record-breaking 144 staff and financial planners to take part in the trail walking challenge.

Peter Crewe, Chief Executive Officer, AIA Hong Kong & Macau (middle); Bonnie Tse, General Manager, Business Strategy and Marketing, AIA Hong Kong & Macau (right); and Jim Jan Zen, Chief Agency Officer, Agency Distribution, AIA Hong Kong & Macau (left), took part in the "Oxfam Trailwalker 2017 – Leaders Against Poverty Walk".

The four members of each team supported each other and were fearless in the 100km course.

A Fresh and Vegan Choice: Tofu “Cheesecake”

While everyone loves a good cheesecake, some are weary of their over-the-top richness and sweetness. Then what about a tofu “cheesecake”? This extraordinary option recreates the creamy texture of cheesecake but with Japanese silken tofu. The creamy flavour of tofu is combined with the light aroma of lemons that replaces the full-bodied and heavy textures of traditional cheesecakes with an airy freshness. To continue the healthy streak, the crust is even made with rolled oats and almonds so you can refill all the portions you want without feeling stuffed.

Another remarkable feature of the cake is that it contains no dairy and is perfect for vegans. Veganism – a lifestyle that rejects any harm to animals – is on the rise in the US and Europe. Not only does it advocate against eating meat, but also against the consumption of animal-derived foodstuffs such as milk, eggs and honey. Though the tofu “cheesecake” goes against conventional baking concepts, its mix of new elements is ideal for those who want to stay healthy while satisfying their sweet tooth.

Ingredients (for 6 servings):

- 100g rolled oats
- 50g almonds
- 2tbsp maple syrup
- 500g Japanese silken tofu
- 4tbsp agave syrup
- 6tbsp lemon juice
- a small amount of lemon zest
- 1tsp vanilla essence
- lemon marmalade

Method:

1. Preheat the oven to 180°C.
2. Place rolled oats, almonds and maple syrup in a blender and blend until the mixture is crumbly. Spread the mixture evenly on an 8-inch plate and press with a spoon to form the crust.
3. Drain the water from the block of silken tofu. Mix with agave syrup, lemon juice, lemon zest and vanilla essence in a blender.
4. Spread the mixture over the crust. Bake for 45 minutes.
5. Serve with lemon marmalade.

Tips:

- Almonds can be replaced by other nuts such as walnuts and cashews. For a richer taste, add sunflower seeds and pumpkin seeds.
- Non-vegans can replace maple syrup and agave syrup with honey.
- Silken tofu is known for its soft consistency and soya flavour. It can also be replaced by ordinary tofu.
